Event Report & Synopsis

On 2nd November 2023, the Population Education Club (PEC) of the Department of Lifelong Learning and Extension (DLLE) organized the Red Dot Campaign, a thoughtful initiative focused on raising awareness about the responsible disposal of sanitary napkins. Held on the college premises, the campaign not only addressed an often-overlooked environmental issue but also emphasized the health and well-being of the college's support staff, whose work environment is directly affected by improper disposal practices.

The campaign aimed to break taboos around menstruation and promote hygienic and environmentally conscious waste management practices. Volunteers from the PEC interacted with students, faculty, and staff, explaining the importance of marking used sanitary napkin disposal bags with a red dot—a simple yet impactful gesture to ensure safe handling. Informational posters, demonstrations, and engaging conversations made the campaign accessible and effective, while also encouraging everyone to take responsibility for their personal waste. The initiative also served as a platform to educate support staff on the potential health risks associated with improper handling of menstrual waste and the steps they could take to protect themselves.

The Red Dot Campaign was more than just an awareness drive; it was a step toward fostering empathy and responsibility within the college community. By addressing a critical yet often neglected issue, the campaign inspired participants to rethink their habits and contribute to a healthier and more sustainable environment. The initiative not only left a lasting impression but also set an example of how small, thoughtful actions can create a ripple effect of positive change.
